

Inside the Apartment – Chores

We all have to do chores; it's just part of the equation when it comes to having physical bodies. One of our objectives with The Magic Happens Magazine is to keep it real and allow everyone to see that we are real people doing regular every day stuff as well as making our dreams come true. So today, we are going to share with you some of the chores we do regularly.

First meet the supervisory committee. Whiskey and Socrates keep a vigilant eye on our doings, we can only assume they do that to make sure we are doing things right. Occasionally, they even help out with a few things like making the bed or dusting the trampoline as you can see Socrates doing here.

Of course there are a few things they regularly beg us not to do – like vacuum. Whiskey is convinced that if there is a hell on earth, it lives in the vacuum and so he hides in the farthest corner he can find as soon as he hears it. That's him up on top of the kitchen cupboard. For some odd reason, he seems to believe that the monster vacuum can't get him up there. That's actually one of Socrates favorite places to play. One cat's hidey whole is another cat's play space. LOL

Here is Wayne playing super dust dude. Wayne really is a remarkable multi-tasker; so good in fact, I believe we woman could learn a thing or two from him. It looks here like he is dusting however, he is also trying to figure out how to write code for something, planning his day (i.e. when to have his shower and stuff) cooking and deciding what route we should take to the club we were to go to that night. I mean really ladies, he is the master...

Once every three days we have to go get water for our trusty water cooler. We are very picky about our water – it has to taste good. See it in the back there beside our house mate Julie Coombs? We will never again be without a water cooler. It is so convenient to have fresh cold water available with a twist of a spigot. We do need to replenish the supply regularly though. We tend to drink more water this way too.

Lucky for us, the local Culligan dealer is right across the road so replenishing is an easy matter. It is so close we can see the store from our balcony as shown in this picture.

Wayne is pushing the granny cart that we use to move the 10 gallon jugs to the apartment. Along the way to get the water, he multi-tasks again and drops of our various forms of garbage; white bags down the trash chute and cardboard into the bin.

We live on a pretty busy street so we have to pay attention when we cross the road.

3 long minutes later, we arrive at our destination.

First thing we do when we get there is sanitize the bottle with a special solution that sprays upwards automatically when you put the bottle over the nozzle. Then we have fill the bottle itself – yup it's a do it yourself system folks and we pay about $2.35 for each 10 gallon bottle. That's cheaper than a couple of small bottles from the convenience store. Next Wayne hammers on the top that makes the whole water cooler part work.

A job well done Wayne!! Total time? 11 minutes, and now all the chores for that day are complete!! Now it's Play time!!
