

The Magic is Strong

by David Little

It's been a while since my last musing & I just wanted to say I'm still here :-)

I went to an amazing performance a couple of nights ago here in Vancouver. It was by a guitarist by the name of Don Ross & his partner Brooke Miller.

It was in a small venue that also doubles as a church, an awesome space. It turns out that Brooke & Don met through their music. A true LOA story.

Don is this talented Canadian fingerpicker who spans many different styles from folk to jazz & some indescribable stuff. He is well known in Folkie circles all over the world.

Brooke is a singer/songwriter who is a force all her own. She has a unique energy that you can feel right away.

They took turns playing together & Don did some solo efforts as well as backing Brooke on Dobro & Lap Steel.

The thing I found most inspiring was the "vibe" when they were playing together, a real connection to "Source" was evident. This gave me a feeling that anything is possible if you follow your heart & let your "inner self" be your guide.

a gift you should accept it wholeheartedly with gratitude & amazement.

What I always take away from these experiences is a feeling that I should continue following the path I'm on. I believe when the Universe brings you

When you allow things to flow anything is possible.

Until next time keep on playing your heart out!

Hi Aikido people! :-0

I am Baaack!

I just attended a grading for a 3rd & two 2nd kyus

For non practioners that is a green & blue belt level of practice.

I was there to support members of our dojo as well as our sister dojo across town.

It reminded me of when my practice began a short five years ago. I was very raw & enthusiastic. I am still enthusiastic, just a little more refined.

After the grading which everyone passed, we all greeted our fellow students with a deep sense of Joy & Love.

Then we began a class where I got to participate with my son & Sensei. How cool is that!

Today I am appreciating all the wonder the Universe has to offer!
