

Wayne's Theme

A Theme: a unifying or dominant idea.....

Each year around this time, I set out a theme for myself. The theme for the year is something that I desire to learn more about, mull around in my head, gain new insights into or just see where it takes me for the whole year. I have been doing this for the past few years and have made some real strides into learning more of who I am. Information flows into me about my theme throughout each year and continues to evolve over time to expand me as an individual.

A theme seems to be a really meaningful thing as I scan around our world.

We have theme restaurants, theme parties and dances, theme parks, theme meetings, theme conferences, theme cruises, theme holidays, and so on and on. Almost every one, every where seems to feel that themes are a good thing for us to be a part of, so why not create a theme for one of the most powerful and useful tools; our brain.

Kat turned me onto this a few years ago and I have not looked back once at doing this for myself. It is not like I must go out and seek this new information around a theme, I am finding that it just comes to me from all sources throughout the whole year; setting the intention, being open to the possibilities and then seeing it when it flows into me.

You know the really beautiful thing about all this, is that just because I start a theme at the first of the year; it does not mean it ends at the completion of the year. December 31st, is not the cut off date, it goes on and on and on. That is the cool thing about opening up to a new concept or new energies. They continue to move forward as you gain more knowledge around a theme. It gets added to previous themes and thoughts to help make you more of who you really are.

For example, a couple of years ago, I used the theme of communication for my yearly intention. During that year and in the years that have followed, I obtained information that helped me understand more about my personal communication that has truly moved me into new areas of play. Look at it this way, a few years back, I would have never thought of, let alone actually participating in communicating with people through a magazine. My writing style, although nowhere near author status, has vastly improved. (Thanks for the wonderful help on this Kat!)

Last year, my theme was to dabble with being an Inter Dimensional Conduit. Basically stated, I desired to gain knowledge on the energies that flow into me from all sources, and use this information to become closer connected to my source energy. My advancement in this has been overwhelming and continues to be a part of me. What I have learned is that I am a conduit through which information/energy flows.

I found that this information has come to me from many sources that I really never paid much attention to before.

For example...

Have you ever just been sitting there and a thought comes to you and you just kind of shook it off. Well, this past year, I have taken that thought or piece of information, no matter how it came to me or what it was and started to pay real attention to it. By doing so, I am now able to connect many other pieces of information, to come up with a completely new concept or realization. To me, it is almost like a channeling of information from somewhere, some source, into me.

As the year progressed, I found that if I desired something, as in a new piece of information relating to something important to me, it would just appear in my head, or a book would arrive or someone I spoke to would give me the information. All this was done within a short period of time with the full knowledge that this is what I required in that moment. Learning to be that open conduit from source to me has been a real eye opener, to say the least.

My theme for this year is one of Self Appreciation.

Who knows what will come out of this year's theme but I look forward to another year, one of tremendous movement centered in self appreciation. Universe, please bring this on...I am a great and deserving person. S My first statement of self appreciation for this year.

I do encourage each of you reader's to think about the direction of your life for this year, whether you make it a theme or not. If there is one thing I have learned over time, is that we can create the life we desire but it must always begin from within each of us first.

Hmmm, themes, I wondering what kind of party I can create for all The Magic Happens readers. How about, come dressed up as your most profound thought. I'll bring the camera.....
