

Shots From The Balcony

It's amazing how many different pictures can be taken from one scene. In an effort to help you get to know us, we thought we would share some of what we see with you. 😊

This is the cloud formations we saw near sunset after a thunder storm. Watching clouds is one of our favorite things to do.

Adding the moon offers an interesting dynamic to the same clouds.

When the sky is hazy it is usually quite hot and humid here where we live, but it also creates some fascinating effects at sunset.

The sun and cloud mix offered this remarkable image that resembles a torch in the fog.

This is our wind chime taken with the sunset in the back ground. Fun and beautiful pictures take just a little imagination.

We are sure it is scenes like this that convinced an ancient culture that there was a place called heaven and that it was a bright and beautiful place.

An early afternoon thunderstorm created these angry looking clouds. We appreciated the storm though as we aren't getting nearly enough rain this year so far.

Red skies in morning, sailors take warning. Red skies at night, sailors delight.

The evening heralding another fine day ahead. Life is good isn't it?

Email Wayne and Kat

