

The Ticket... and a Quick Return

By Christy Ledyard

I have to give a little background first before I share the story.

I have a cousin that I've always been very close to. She's very in to spiritualism, intending, respecting the earth... She and I are kindred spirits on many levels. Two years ago while gardening I had an urgent feeling to call her. I felt something was wrong or she needed me, I couldn't really define it. So I went in the house and called her. I said "I just got a mental message to call, is everything OK?" She told me the police had just left and they had found her husband in a motel room. He had committed suicide.

My cousin has been through much in her life. Her parents moved to Saudi Arabia from Kansas City when she was 15. She lived with an Aunt and Uncle and it didn't go well at all. She ended up running away.

She's never left Missouri, except for once when her Mother had a stroke and she went to Mississippi for a couple weeks. Her life has been hard, really hard. But she has a wonderful giving and loving spirit.

OK... Fast forward: I got up in the morning and let the dog out. The sun was shining (for once) and I went out on my deck in my jammies and thanked the universe for the lovely morning. As I looked out at the field beyond our house I saw 4 deer meandering around. Bonus!!! I felt really good with a high vibration in sync with everything.

I later called my cousin to check in. She lives alone with her 16 yr old daughter in a mobile home with rooms built on. Her husband did leave her 20 acres to live on. She loves it there. She knows she could sell it and have a decent home but she is happy right where she is. It is really pretty land.

Anyhow... My husband works in Alaska and we fly back and forth to see each other. I told her I plan on going again the end of June. She said "Oh, I would love it there, it's so beautiful!" The conversation continued and I said I was going to the casino later.

Jokingly, I said I'll win enough and buy you a ticket. She said, Yeah!! Wouldn't that be funny if you did? You will in like 3 tries! We laughed over it, said are goodbye's and off I went.

On the way to the casino I was thinking I wish the radio would play "Life Is A Highway", it's such a great road song. I start flipping through the channels trying to find something and....you guessed it. "Life is a highway" from 1992 was playing. Ha! I wish I could have seen my own face... lol.

So I get to the casino and I just kind of stroll around until I spot a machine that has a big wolf on Alaskan Mountains (they were Alaskan to me). *note - I've been active in stopping the air slaughter (from helicopters) of wolves in Denali Park, so this machine spoke to me. I put my $20.00 in and bet the maximum bet. First pull-nothing, 2nd pull-nothing, 3rd pull $1500.00!!

After I left the casino I was thinking of all the stuff I could do with $1500.00. Then it hit me what I was SUPPOSED to do with it. My cousin may have been joking but I was going to buy her that ticket!!

I called her the next morning to tell her and I don't think I've heard pure joy and gratefulness like hers for a long time. I told her the story of the song in the car and why I picked that machine and that I barely had been there 5 min when I won, I got it on the 3rd pull. She said "The 3rd pull?!? Don't you remember me saying that to you?" Then I remembered what she had said. Yup she pretty much predicted the 3rd pull of the slot. She said she couldn't believe I was doing this for her.

I said the Universe is doing it; I'm just an aware conduit.

Anyway, when you give it comes back. So, that was yesterday. I bought her ticket, it was $660.00.

Today in the mail I got a check for $647.00 from the IRS. We had overpaid in 2007!!
Talk about a quick return by the universe!!!

I've manifested some pretty remarkable things, but this by far is the most "In My Face" set of manifestations EVER!!

Namaste,
Christy
