

Greetings from The UK- We Are All 'In It' Together!

This is the first article I've been invited to write for the magazine. In truth this is the first article I've been invited to write for any publication. It's an added honour to be the first international contributor to The Magic Happens, so let's begin.

For those of you familiar with the UK you'll know what a special place it is and of our rich historical legacy. I love this island on which I was born and I love its people. This is my motivation for writing and speaking about my experiences studying and practising the Law of Attraction.

It is my deep held belief that understanding and working in harmony with the law is the birthright of each and every one of us. I work daily on this belief. Practicing the Law of Attraction takes work. It takes effort to keep your mind fixed on the things you wish to bring into your life with full faith knowing that they are yours.

I want to share with you the steps that have led me to a fuller understanding of working with the Law and putting it into daily practice.

The first step for me is a simple but profound change of perspective that you need to make.

Often it can seem like one day you are 'in it', your confidence is high, you can feel the LOA working in your life, you know that you are attracting to you, you see the evidence and you are inspired.

At other times it can seem so far away. Almost too good to be true. You feel 'out of it', reaching instead of drawing to you, you end up pushing your desired good further away.

Why is this?

Why does our faith fluctuate in this way?

There are several reasons. Let's have a look at one of them and see what can be done to increase confidence in the process.

It's important to study. There is no shortage of material available in print or in audio visual formats. There is no shortage of quality speakers on the subject of the LOA.

There is in truth no shortage of good anywhere.

If you do nothing else then simply watching 'The Secret' over and over again will uplift and inspire you.

You must study, and you must do so in a disciplined way.

The reason for this is very simple.

Your conditioning is most likely very strong. Most of us are coming to an understanding of the Law late in life. Most of us are not from parents with an understanding of the Law. We have not passed through a system of education that has taught us the Law. In fact it is often the case for each of us that we have been taught the exact opposite of the Law.

Now, what you consider to be 'late in life' is entirely dependant on your perspective. My point is that most of us were not conditioned as babies and small children to believe in our creative power, rather we were conditioned to look outside of ourselves for meaning and so formed a picture of who we are, what we can do, be and have, based on the information coming back at us from our environment.

These lessons in life grew stronger through repetition.

Repetition is a vital part of the learning process. We are learning to believe in our birthright. We are learning to believe in ourselves as loving, infinite, creative beings.

That's where the effort goes.

The change of perception is to accept and understand that the LOA is working in your life now. The law LOA has always been working in your life and further more it always will be working in your life.

It never has stopped.

It never does stop.

It never will stop.

In the past I've found myself feeling as if I'm making the LOA work in my life because I'm thinking about it and making the effort to work with it.

This is a subtle misunderstanding of the way the Law works.

I am not causing the Law to work. I am simply directing the way in which it works in my life.

I am directing the Law with my thought and with my feelings.

It works through me, but not because of me. If I ceased to exist as the human identity I am now, the Law would not cease to operate for all the other human beings on the material plane.

The Law never stops. The universe is continually expanding. Creation is an ongoing process and creation manifests through you.

The more time you spend studying this idea, the stronger it will become within you until it is your habitual way of thinking.

Remember, conditioning is what you have learned to believe.

What you believe are the thoughts that you think which you do not question.

Your beliefs are your thinking habits.

We need to be continually acquiring new thinking habits that work for us and not against us.

We do this most effectively through repetition.

I remember having a private audience with a visiting Swami one summer in London.

I told him of the trouble I was having staying on the spiritual path.

During the audience he received a text message on his mobile phone. He excused himself and read it. I found this strange. Somehow I was not expecting him to be so modern. I certainly was a bit taken aback that he would take a call or a message while I was in his presence.

I was a little offended. I'd waited all day to see him. I'd made a donation that was for me at the time rather generous. Boy did my sense of self importance rise up.

Then he put the phone away and looked at me with the most loving eyes.

I felt the kind of energy that you feel when you connect with another on a deep level. I felt as if I was swimming in an ocean of energy.

He said, 'Your problem is that you are in it, then you are out of it. You have to learn to stay in it.'

That was several years ago and of course over those years I have continued to be 'in it' and also to be 'out of it'.

The important thing is to know that we are in it, all the time, and what's more we are all in it together!

Watching 'The Secret' over and over again helps me to stay 'in it'.

Going on the Powerful Intentions website helps me to stay 'in it'.

Being part of 'The Magic Happens' helps me to stay 'in it'.

Constant study helps me to stay 'in it'.

It's been such a pleasure to visit here for the first time and to meet with you in this way. I look forward to many more opportunities to stay 'in it' together in the ever present now that we call future.

Ask for your good knowing that you receive it. It is your birthright. Ask for it now, there is only ever now, therefore it is yours now.

We will discuss other facets of the Law of what is in articles to come.

Until the we meet again,

Love from The UK

Michael.
