

Boink, Boink A New Level...

For some twenty years or so there has been a video game out on the market called Mario Brothers. It was a game where Mario goes on adventures of challenge and obtains new higher levels as he progressed. With each new leap and or level the sound of boink, boink would blare from the speakers.

I have used this phrase many times, as I have progressed through my life as a personal indicator to me of another level attained.

This happening article is one that provided me with one gigantic boink, boink.

After sending an email to my best soul-u-lar connection, I was elated to have her respond that she would love to go for a hike with me. A time and date was set, I picked her up and we stopped for the mandatory road trip essential of a coffee from Tim Horton's. It is a Canadian thing up here. LOL Off to a trail called Sulphur Springs some twenty kilometers away, which I have written about in a past edition. The hike was all about fresh air, something to do with her and the connecting to source energy.

The day was not perfect, a slight chance of rain and a bit cooler than the intense humidity we had been having but all was feeling amazingly good. I should have known by my own energy that the day would take me to a new level of my awareness in spirituality. She had never been on this trail before and within minutes of our traversing onto the trail, her energy changed to one of amazement and wonderment. I could feel her energy way out beyond her, seeking what was all around her. The conversation was of the energy and the beauty of the trail, which made for one splendid hike.

About half way through there is a marvelous babbling brook with a few benches to sit and reflect upon. We sat in peace for sometime before she was in awe of an opening in tree stump that seemed to be an apparent portal of sorts to her. It even brought a few tears to her eyes as she seemed fixed on this moment totally. I will not speak for her but what I sensed was something that only she would be able to place into words but I know it was all good.

Many moments later, we departed for the remainder of the trail. A particular area further up the trail encompasses not only the beauty of the Canadian Shield with the Niagara Escarpment but shows off some trees, and natural habitat very similar to the Carolinas. We both stood there in amazement viewing the splendor and energy of the moment.

Suddenly unexpectedly,

I saw flashing white lights popping up all over the view that I focused on.

That was not the astounding part, as this stuff does not generally fizz on me. I am one that feels and sees a variety of energy in many forms. I took a moment and explained this to my trail partner. She is one who grasps this energy stuff quickly so she fully understood where I was at. From there we moved forward some fifty feet or so to another vantage point.

As rapidly as we reached this new area and I once again focused to the energy. The white light suddenly engulfed my body with a tremendous thud. I stammered something to Jewel about me having to sit down. I had no idea what just happened but my body was limp and I was in tears. Some five minutes or so later I was able to stand and approach her as she was giving me my space. Feeling weak and wasted, she held onto me for the next little while as we progressed towards the end of the trail. I felt astonishment and wonder inside but also too many questions too even think of or answer as to what just happened. I just let it go.

The hike ended with beautiful energy and we decided to go for mid afternoon lunch to further our connection, exchange thoughts on energy and life stuff. All was wonderful and with that, I returned her home making for an amazing day of friendship and source connection.

That evening and the following couple of days while in mediation, these same lights appeared before as they did to me on the hike. This time they not only felt different but acted differently also. They were much more calming and descended upon me in a very gentle fashion rather than that of the previous thud to the body.

I felt a connection to source both visually and now through the voices I was hearing.

Talk about a real epiphany of sorts. Whether it was thoughts I promoted, spirit actually connecting to me, angel voices, it really does not matter. What I was receiving was connection from another source feeding me relevant information on things that I was contemplating or inquiring about life.

The start of this was over a month ago, since then I have had many occurrences of light, and information come unto me from source. The way I perceive it is that I always knew in time this aspect of spirit would come for me to experience.

I am so very blessed that on that particular day, when I wrote my soul-u-lar connection, she agreed to go for a hike with me. My life has expanded exponentially ever since that stunning hike. I thank you Jewel for your unending support and to source for the amazing connection.

Boink, boink , another level of my adventure in life. *S*

Peace and Love
Wayne

Email Wayne